President and CEO

STV

As the president and chief executive officer of STV, Greg is responsible for overseeing the workforce of over 2,500 employees and guiding the firm toward achieving its short- and long-term strategic goals with an emphasis on performance, business development, technology, and human capital. STV is a leader in providing architectural, engineering, planning, environmental, and program and construction management services for transportation systems, infrastructure, buildings, energy, and other facilities.

Greg was previously chief executive officer of a leading midwest construction and materials provider of asphalt products, aggregate supply, and roadbuilding construction. Prior to that, was a member of the global executive team and CEO of the U.S. operation of one of the world's leading professional services firms providing advisory, planning, design, engineering and program and construction management services across transport, property and buildings, water, energy and the environment sectors.

Greg is an experienced and outspoken industry leader and has been inducted into the National Academy of Construction and the MOLES, two of the most prestigious organizations in the industry. He has degrees from Temple University and the New Jersey Institute of Technology and is a registered professional engineer in several states.
